

The Shirt pattern pieces you'll need:

Pattern Alteration Steps

1. Shape the Front pattern piece.

Draw a line just above the 4th button hole, perpendicular to the Centre Edge.

Draw another line down from the Armhole.

Match up the lines to make a rectangular or curved shape.

If you plan to do a folded hem, incorporate the hem allowance. Alternatively you can overlock or bind the raw edges and won't need to accommodate a hem.

2. Cut along the line and you should have a Front piece that looks something like this.

If your Button Stand is a separate pattern piece, simply shorten it to match your new Front piece.

3 Optional: Extend the Yoke to make a new Back piece.

The length depends on your pattern piece and preference.

The new Back piece does not need to be the same length as the new Front piece.

My Yoke pattern piece was a bit short for my liking and I was concerned that it may stick out of my clothes on the finished item so I lengthened it a bit.

If you plan to do a folded hem, incorporate the hem allowance. Alternatively you can overlock or bind the raw edges and won't need to accommodate a hem.

4. Shape the new Yoke/new Back piece.

Draw a line down from the Armhole.

Match up the line with the bottom edge to make a rectangular or curved shape.

5. Cut along the line and you should have a Back piece that looks something like this.
